At Wharton we are going to hold a fun competition to see who can make the best marble run! We would like your child to build one at home and bring it to school on Monday 7th October to be judged by Adrian Bowden on Tuesday 8th October (Science week). Adrian is a Scientist who regularly visits our school. There will be a winner for each year group. We have all watched a clip about marble runs and thought about how forces work so hopefully the children will be beginning to plan and design one. Luckily it can be made out of lots of recyclable items so please keep it simple. (There are lots of ideas on the internet/ You Tube for children's marble runs.) We would just like you all to have fun and take part. It's the entering that counts! Your child will be so proud to bring one in.

Thank You!

Don't forget to write your name and your year group on the model somewhere.
